Dear Bill:

I am delighted to hear that you are interested in coming to the Hoover Institution for an informal seminar with our scholars sometime this spring.

[redacted] tells me that he has been in touch with [redacted] from your staff.

We will be pleased to make the arrangements for this visit to suite your convenience. We would enjoy having you as our guest for lunch, either before or after the seminar, or for dinner in the evening. If, however, you are pressed for time, we can have just the seminar at anytime you wish.

The format for these meetings has been very informal. Our guest chooses his own topic on which to speak and this is followed by general discussion with our scholars.

If your office will advise us whenever you can choose a convenient date to visit the Hoover Institution, we will be happy to make the arrangements.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,
